

woman to love an abusive husband? I'm not talking about the way you and I might feel about that, do you think it's possible...

SENATOR LABEDZ: I was just going to say, you talking about me?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: (Laugh.) No, no, no. Do you think it's possible for a woman, or for her to think that she loves such a person?

SENATOR LABEDZ: Yes, I'm afraid there are some women in this world that would still love and support an abusive husband. We have spouse abuse,...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay.

SENATOR LABEDZ: ...and, remember, there's a lot of them that won't admit that they're being abused,...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay.

SENATOR LABEDZ: ...because they still love their husband,...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay. Now,...

SENATOR LABEDZ: ...unfortunately.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay, now the bible didn't say that a man should leave father and mother for his grandparents or his parents, but for his wife, and vice versa. So, if that marital relationship is so important that a person should leave his or her father and mother to maintain it, why in the world are we going to say that a grandparent should not be expected to keep that information from the parent of the...

PRESIDENT MOUL: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...grandchild, but the wife should be expected to keep that secret from her husband, whom the bible says she should leave her father and mother for. And I'm not asking that as a question for you to answer, Senator Labedz, because you have your light on, you can deal with it at length, if you choose. That shows the inconsistency and the lack of logic of these arguments that are given by people who simply want to restrict, and, if possible, take away a woman's right to have an abortion. On the one hand you don't want grandma to
